HONGKONG, FRIDAY, OCT. 16, 1868.

PUBLIC OPINION IN HONGKONG.

SIR RICHARD MACDONNELL appears to labor under a difficulty, the emanation of which has somewhat astonished the Colony. This difficulty is as regards public opinion. His Excellency would greatly like to know "what public opinion is (or was) in Hongkong, and how he is to get at it." He is not the first official of high position who has had his private doubts upon the matter, though we do not at the moment recollect that any public man has of late been incautious enough to take the public into his confidences under this head. Messrs Bright and Disraeli have, for instance, doubtless seen this pondered as to what really was "public opinion," the one enjoying the pleasure of seeing himself alternately lauded as one of the leading orators, intellects, etc., of the age; and sneered at as a traitor to every patriotic feeling, the peace at any price man, and, unkind out of all, (from American pens too) the "factions demagogue and able bully." Mr Disraeli too must have times at which his mind is exercised on the subject. But they have a reason for doubting, which colonial officials can scarcely ever plead. The opinion of three million may be difficult to arrive at, but that of three thousand individuals may be ascertained without much difficulty. Considering also that Hongkong possesses a Council whose unofficial members are not, as a rule, backward in speaking their minds, and that two daily journals exist to give utterance to the public voice, His Excellency's difficulty is even less comprehensible. We fear that he made a mistake in the words he used. Public "approval" would have better expressed his real thoughts.

An American paper says that with Mr J. R. Browne, there have come to China Charles D. Poston, Commissioner of the Agricultural Department, and Baron Richthofen, the eminent geologist. These (says the paper) are all gentlemen of observing that—that gambling could not be expressed, and secondly, that by control crime would be seriously checked. Now, I wonder if the Governor has ever fairly asked himself whether he could not use the same machinery and the same engineer now employed on the Gambling Farm, might have been. The power of France centred entirely in her Gallic possessions. Algeria is confessedly a failure, and the Mexican expedition was probably her last attempt to extend her rule beyond the seas. She has fleets, an extensive commerce, shipping, colonies, political connections, and some of the most powerful arms, but she has no material, influencing the future destinies of other nations. England, still ruling in all quarters of the globe, and owning vast territories, in every region, is certainly a cosmopolitan power; but a closer examination will show that in her case also the process of retrogression has set in. She has lost the North American colonies; Canada has been a failure; India has been a loss for themselves; and even India will obey the same law by which these full-grown children sever their connection with the parent land. England, satiated with wealth, no longer feels the impulses to expand which the England of former days experienced. If the surrender of the Iouian Islands was a sign of the impending change, the case with which the temptation to hold, a bygone empire, has been resisted, is a still stronger one. A century ago such an opportunity to add a country, successfully overrun by her arms, to the national domain would not have been lost. Even now, when we remember that the red cross waves already over the ruins of Aden and the floating batteries of Perim; that Mascara, Algiers, Fezzan, Berberia, and Zanzibar are in the control of British troops, and that the Red Sea is completely under the suzerainty of England in the Red Sea regions and on the east African coast, in spite of the Suez Canal, this abnegation appears truly wonderful.

If this, then, were all the mischief that could be fairly attributed to the Roman Confessional, it might be at once relegated to the regions of theological speculation and Biblical criticism. Unhappily, however, this is impossible. The practical system which has been engrained upon the naked bones of the people is a fruitful source of the results of a character which, placed in direct antagonism with the first principles of all English political life, and to a lesser extent with the first principles of English social life. While the letter of the Roman Confessionals commands confession only once a year and confines the necessity of absolution to "mortal" sins alone, every priest who is not of the old "high and dry" school enforces devout people to confess every possible mortal sin, and to confess all venial sins, upon which the conscience can fasten; and this not only once a year, but once a month, once a fortnight, or even once a week. Nearly the whole of the approved books which are most popular among the "devout" Catholics, whether in England or abroad, are unbaneful on these points; while they carefully suppress the fact that by the Catholic dogmas themselves the necessity of confession is wholly unnecessary for the forgiveness of venial sins, and the result of such ideas and of this practice they induce is obvious. Their direct tendency is to crush out all malignance and independence of mind, and to create a habit of retreating in all things to the judgment of the priesthood, as represented by the individual ecclesiastic whom the devotee may take for a spiritual director. The conscience which is thus devoted to weekly confession is self-spectator, grows morbid and morose, and is always looking out for the ordinary self-interest of life which lies at the root of the political and social existence of Englishmen. No man dares think for himself, and no woman dares think for herself, on any OPPORTUNISTIC has half in front, behind she is bald; if you seize her by the forelock you may hold her; if suffered to escape, riot Jupiter himself can catch her again. Fun suggests, as a companion book to "Every man his own lawyer," "Every fool his own client."

There was recently in London an auction sale of ecclesiastical vestments such as are worn in ritualistic services. The sale was attended by a great many of the clergy, and good prices were realized.

Stoner Smith said to the canons of St. Paul's when they wrote to him urging the advisability of a wood pavement round the churchyard—"Let them lay their heads together and it will be done."

This image shows a vertical strip of a document, likely a book or a bound manuscript. The left side of the strip is dominated by a dark, heavily textured vertical band, which appears to be the binding or gutter of the book. This band has a rough, fibrous appearance with many fine lines and some larger, irregular dark spots. To the right of this dark band, the page is visible, though it is mostly white and lacks any legible text or markings. There are a few small, dark specks scattered across the white area, possibly dust or minor imperfections in the paper. The overall image is oriented vertically, with the binding on the left and the page on the right.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
THIS Medicine is universally admitted to be the most efficacious remedy known to the world. No preparation is so suitable to the climates of India and China as this fine and invigorating medicine. It is particularly adapted to the constitution of European ladies, as it is never failing in its effects in all diseases peculiar to females, while those who are attenuated by the debilitating effects of the above climates will find in this wonderful remedy a kind of life-giving medicine, which will insure a restoration to robust health.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
The salience of Medicine has never before produced any remedy that can be compared to this wonderful Ointment, as it cures after all other means have failed, all wounds, sores, ulcers, and also the most inveterate skin diseases peculiar to the climates of India and China. It is the true friend of the Soldier and Civilian, as certain old sores can be removed by it that cannot be conquered by any other treatment.

These for calculating the prices of tea in dollars or pence have been copied from the more extended tables, by the kind permission of the author, P. Loureiro, Esq. The last section of the same chapter, on 'Movements in Bullion' has been prepared and furnished for the Guide by Patrick B. Harper, Esq., of the Commercial Bank of India at Hongkong, who has had much experience in the exchanges and movements of the precious metals in Eastern Asia. 'The Appendix of Sailing Directions has been reprinted from the 'China Pilot.' With short interruptions, the coasts from Singapore to Hainan are all described in it; and for the Chinese coasts, the Directions have been improved by the insertion of the Chinese characters for the names of all places that could be ascertained."
